WORK BEGUN.

The Local Branch of the Humane Society Now at Work

Summary of the Cases Which it has Already Investigated

Cruelty to Animals Prevented in a Number of Instances

The Colorado City Jail Found in a Filthy Condition.

[illegible]

The first case was that against Jacob Shidler a ranchman living in the vicinity of Monument. This case was alluded to by the Denver Republican last Tuesday morning, but the details given were so much at variance with the exact status of the case as to warrant the publication of the true facts regarding it.

On the 27th of last June a market basket containing the body of a healthy male infant was found by a rear parker in the underbrush along the Platte river in the suburbs of the city of Denver. The child was placed in the Womanes Home in that city and the authorities at once began to investigate the question as to how the child came to the place where it was found and by whom it was brought there. About a week after the child was found the officers of the Colorado Humane Society at Denver received an anonymous letter dated at Monument in which it was stated that about the 20th of June an illegitimate child had been born to Louisa Shidler who resided with her parents near that place. The letter further stated that on the 21st of that month the infant had disappeared and its whereabouts were unknown.

As the date of this incident so nearly tallied with the finding of the child at Denver suspicion was at once directed against the Shidler household. Monument being included within the jurisdiction of the El Paso branch the matter was referred to it to investigate. The case was placed in the hands of Officer Jackson with instructions to push it to the full extent of the law.

Mr. Jackson soon arrived at the truth of the matter which resulted in the arrest of Jacob Shidler the father of the girl. He learned that on the night of June 20th Shidler had taken the child to Denver on the D. & R. G. railroad. He was recognized on the train by several personal acquaintances who were quite surprised to notice that the old man had a young infant with him. The basket in which the child was found was identified by the conductor of the train as the one which Shidler had in his possession on the night of the 20th.

Shidler was arrested about ten days ago on a warrant issued by a justice of the peace at Colorado City. During the absence of the county attorney Shidler went to Colorado City, plead guilty to the charge brought against him and paid a fine of $25 and costs which was imposed upon him. On investigation it was found that the justice had exceeded his authority and that the accused party should either have been bound over to the district court or should have been discharged. In pleading guilty to the charge Shidler not only confessed his guilt but the fine which he paid did not release him from suffering the penalty of his act. The matter will not be [illegible] It is probable steps have been taken to place Shidler again in the hands of the law.

On July 11th Sheriff Jackson killed a cow which was suffering from a broken thigh.

On the same date local shippers of poultry and agents of the express companies were warned that complaints had been made to the effect that poultry was being shipped to this city in coops far too small and that this difficulty would have to be remedied at once.

On the 9th of July a complaint was entered against a woman for cruelly beating her child and not supplying it with sufficient food. When the woman returned that here on bail was to be investigated she left the city for Leadville.

On July 30th a complaint was filed against a horse which had raw and bleeding [illegible] daily in harness at the Rock Island grading camp north of the city. The general treatment of the animals at that camp was also complained of. The warning was given the owner of the stock that the society would interfere if the animals were subjected to further cruelty and ill treatment.

On July 30th a woman at Grinker complained that her husband had beaten and badly used both herself and her children and that she had been in the habit of taking refuge with one of the neighbors and fearing for protection in the future. The husband was informed that if he repeated his conduct he would be arrested.

On July 31st Sheriff Jackson killed a small colt of Harness with a lariat gone in its neck.

On the same date the society was informed that the jail at Colorado City

The Cities Reply to Talk

[illegible] August 8.—The agent of the Southern Cities held an informal [illegible] the trade with the exception of Savannah and Buckskin Charlie who had yet come in. The chiefs after words had a long consultation and decided to formally meet the commissioners tomorrow and after hearing what they have to say they will then state their own grievances. The commissioners have not the slightest idea as to the result of the meeting but hope it will be satisfactory.

The Sioux Quiet

WASHINGTON, August 8.—The secretary of war received a telegram from General Howard this morning stating that the difficulties with the Indians seemed at an end and he had no anticipation of any further trouble.

CHICAGO, August 8.—A dispatch from the Indian commissioners at Standing Rock agency says: The commissioners will remain here a short time. The Indians are departing quietly for their homes and the commissioners are of the opinion that when free from the restraint of their leaders they will think more seriously and favorably of the propositions submitted to them by the government. Echoes of this already appear. Those favoring the propositions are beginning to speak out in single and talk to accept them. The commissioners have now conclusive evidence that the refusal of the Indians to sign the agreement when assisted to gather in council was owing to a preconcerted scheme of intimidation inaugurated and carried out by Sitting Bull, Gall and others. The commissioners have information from Indian sources that when freedom of speech and action [illegible] a large number will accept of it.

The House Committee

WASHINGTON, August 8.—Speaker Carlisle has appointed the following named persons as representatives of the house upon the joint congressional committee to attend General Sheridan's funeral: Hooker of Mississippi, Catchem of Michigan, Wheeler of Alabama, Henderson of Illinois, Cox of New York, Grosvenor of Ohio and Meshan of Nebraska.

Superior Jess Refuse.

DENVER, August 8.—The supreme court this morning refused to grant a supersedeas in the case of Nicolini Fennenelli the Italian sentenced to be hanged at Buena Vista to-day. The [illegible] presented to the court alleg that one of the jurors before the trial when Fennenelli was convicted said "The d d Italian ought to be hanged on general principles but this was not conclusively proven to the supreme court, and Justice Beck in rendering the opinion said that the court was unable to find sufficient error [illegible] by fifty citizens of Denver asking for further respite was immediately telegraphed Governor Adams who is at Durango and at 9 o'clock to night a telegram was received at the state house granting the condemned man fifteen days more.

Appeals for Brooks

ST. LOUIS, August 8.—The matter of granting a respite to Brooks alias Maxwell was heard this afternoon by Governor Moorehouse, at the executive office in Jefferson City. Arguments were made and papers presented by Messrs. Martin and Fountelroy attorneys for Brooks and the proceedings extended over several hours. Evidence was introduced tending to show that two of the jurors were in July prejudiced against Maxwell. Also a dispatch from the Berlin minister to Martin and Fountelroy asking them to inform the governor that the request of the British government had been made direct to him through the secretary of state. Governor Moorehouse will give his decision to-morrow morning.

Assurances of Peace.

BERLIN, August 8.—The National Zeitung says: Prince Bismarck has expressed the greatest pleasure at the result of the meeting of Emperor William and the czar and says it will have the effect of establishing a good feeling between them by means of which, as far as human calculation goes, peace last [illegible]

Burned in a Tenement House

NEW YORK, August 8.—Early this morning a four story tenement house in Avenue A caught fire. The family of Gustave Bog consisting of himself wife, daughter and mother in law, living on the top floor were burned to death. The other occupants escaped. The financial loss is insignificant.

Lost in a Fog

LISBON, August 8.—A dense fog prevails in the English channel. The steamer City of Hamburg and a British union laden with cattle went ashore near the starting point for Cape Finisterre. Fifteen persons are landed at Sagres. A boat containing others is missing.

Passed its Third Reading

LONDON, August 8.—The [illegible] commission to examine into the charges made by the Times against Parnell and other members of parliament passed its third reading in the commons this afternoon 190 to 64.

Arrangements at Nonquitt

NONQUITT, August 8.—Arrangements for the removal of General Sheridan's remains to Washington are completed. At 11:30 the undertakers had finished their work with the exception of draping the mail sacks over the casket. The casket has been placed on two rests in the center of the room in which the general died. The expression of the face is very natural and peaceful. He has on dressed in a general's uniform, the coat buttoning closely to the neck with a little space open showing a white collar and black necktie. His right arm lies across his breast and the left arm is placed at the side. Upon the casket are placed the general's chapeau, sash belt and sword. There are no decorations on the casket as no floral display will be made although several tributes have been received. From this time no one will be allowed to see the remains except Mrs. Sheridan, members of the family and the general's staff. It is not now expected that at Washington any except a limited number will be allowed to view the body, it being the special desire of the family to avoid all [illegible] The casket will be borne from the cottage to the wharf on the shoulders of six men and will be escorted by a detail of the Grand Army and by a special guard of honor from the Loyal Legion. Following the casket will be the funeral cortege.

The numerous array of badges which it was customary for Sheridan when alive to wear will not be seen on Sheridan dead. Nothing relieved the breast of his coat save the bright buttons and gold epaulets.

The hours hung heavily until the Monahansett bearing guards of honor from New Bedford Grand Army posts and the Loyal Legion appeared around Clark's point and shortly after Nonquitt wharf. It was 4:30 p. m. when the boat was made fast. When the Grand Army men reached the house they were met by Colonel Kellogg and the undertakers and Colonel Rand went inside to see that [illegible] Grand Army men then formed in front of the wharf the bier on which the casket was borne.

A little wait then occurred. A sad sight was the little faces of Sheridan's children as they peered out of one of the upper windows and watched the Grand Army men come and go. Presently the bier was lifted into the processional and the coffin laid upon it and lifted upon the shoulders of [illegible] The solemn process on passed down over the lawn to the boat.

The coffin was followed by Col. M. V. Sheridan supporting Mrs. General Sheridan upon his arm. Little Phil walked by his mother's side. Next followed Mrs. Col. Sheridan with little Mary. Sister Urbana followed next leading Irene, one of the girls with Sister Justina followed by little Louise, the other twin [illegible] and women servants and Colonel Kellogg and Blunt and Dr. Mattie were at Clark Rock's [illegible] Down the long wharf between the two lines of members of the Loyal Legion in open order passed the procession. The body was next taken aboard followed by members of the Loyal Legion, Grand Army men bearing the casket. The national colors were draped about the [illegible] and the sword, belt and chapeau were on top. The bier was placed in the floor of the after cabin where a Grand Army man held a draped banner of the Loyal Legion.

If the procession had [illegible] the parting was [illegible] Colonel and Mrs. Kellogg with the children and servants were in a little group on the wharf together. Hardly an eye which saw the spectacle was dry. Little Phil [illegible] covered and he broke out crying but the rest bore up nobly. The basis of apportionment is the same as that of the state convention.

The committee recommend that the several precincts hold their primaries on Wednesday, August 29th 1888, at 3 o'clock p.m.

For the Committee:
JOHN CAMPBELL, Chairman
W. H. D. STOVER, Secretary.

We give elsewhere the record of the El Paso branch of the Colorado Humane society. Most of the cases in which it interfered would have been unnoticed had it not been for this society. It has done a noble work in this way and should be supported by all who wish to right wrongs and prevent cruelty.

General A. P. Hovey nominated yesterday to be the republican candidate for governor of Indiana is one of the war heroes. He entered the army as a major. For services at Shiloh he was made brigadier general. At the battle at Champion Hills he commanded a division and largely contributed to the success that settled the fate of Vicksburg. Since the war he has been engaged in business in Indiana. He was appointed minister to Portugal by President Cleveland and is rather [illegible] and he accepts the duty.

It is reported that any change in the management of this state has called forth the bitterness and sincere regret that followed the announcement of the resignation of Mr. D. R. Hotchkiss as the general manager of the Colorado Midland. Mr. Hotchkiss entered upon a peculiarly difficult work. The Colorado Midland is the first broad gauge built on the steep grades and sharp curves that rough mountain country demands. It presented many new problems that he and his assistants have had to settle. It was even doubtful for years if it would ever be a safe road for passenger travel. But the management has been so wise in adapting the road and its trains to the new conditions and so careful in operating, that there is now no more popular road in Colorado as regards travel by the public. But Mr. Hotchkiss has had much to do in all connection with operating the line. When the road was opened he was a little city clerk in the ticket office at Denver. He was a young man with all the qualities that fitted him for the position he filled and he has gone through all the grades of promotion until he has reached the position of general manager. But he has had his share of hard work and anxiety. The road has been slightly [illegible] management. The people have recognized this, and have found Mr. Robinson true to the interests of the city in the line of the Midland and as a consequence the Midland has been steadily growing in the favor of this important class. It is therefore a matter of sincere regret that personal reasons should have determined Mr. Robinson to resign.

The fortunes of this city are intimately connected with the fortunes of the Midland. We shall extend to his successor the same support Mr. Robinson has had and trust that the road may continue to grow in business and good will as it has since the beginning of the year.

Mr. Cable the novelist has in the Forum given the following good advice to the negroes in the south:

Note carefully your political friends. Carefully forget the political foe. Carefully forget the man who would use you for his own political ends. Carefully remember that the blood you have shed for liberty and the blood you have shed for education are the only things that will make it hard for you to be free. Work and pray silently with direct aim against every form of ignorance. It is only men even blooded at last that are fit for the responsibilities of liberty. Where crimes have been committed by the race to which you belong let them be disowned by the race to which you are allied. Let your votes show that you are as true to the public good as any white man's votes. Let your votes show that you are as true to the public good as any white man's votes. Let your votes show that you are as true to the public good as any white man's votes

COLORADO CITY ITEMS.

The Colorado City corner band has one of the finest slide trombone soloists in the person of Mr. Jack Nicholson, recently from San Francisco.

The brick work on the new school house is going up rapidly. It is now reasonably certain that the building will be ready for occupation in time for the fall term of school.

A new quarry has been opened up at the mouth of Red Rock canon by Messrs. Geo. W. and William Snider of Manitou. The stone is being used in the new Manitou school house.

The city council have made arrangements to open up West street through to the Colorado Midland yards, and a substantial bridge will be built across the Fountain. It is understood that the Midland company agree to do the necessary grading south of the creek. This street will make a convenient route from the business portion of the city to the Midland depot.

The Denver & Rio Grande railroad company has contemplated for some time the matter of a third track between Denver and Pueblo. The company however has decided to only lay a portion of the track at present. Yesterday's issue of the Denver Republican had the following concerning this matter: "The preliminary step to a double trackage for the Denver & Rio Grande [illegible] situation of a double track from Denver to Littleton, a distance of ten miles, also to a mile of double track from Colorado Springs and for nineteen miles north of Pueblo double track will also be laid. It is thought that for the present this will answer the purpose of a double line of rail to Pueblo. With proper caution [illegible] as though the double track extended all the way to Pueblo from Denver."

Alamo Arrivals—H. C. Gill, Reynolds; H. C. Weatherby, City; J. M. Conger, M. McLahey, Holdige, Neb.; J. Palmer, Mo.; John P. Phelley and wife, Mo.; F. Smiley, Triandad; W. O. Gen. Sheridan's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, August 8. General Schofield and three of his staff arrived here tonight for the purpose of perfecting arrangements for General Sheridan's funeral. He will issue tickets of admission to St. Matthew's church to the president and cabinet heads of departments, and members of the house and senate and judiciary. The church will seat [illegible] individually. About 1,000 people and invitations will have to be restricted to that number. The military guard of honor will consist of a detachment from the regular army and a detachment from the Loyal Legion. The funeral procession from the church to the [illegible] will be a military one. No place will be made in the line for members of the G. A. R., Loyal Legion or any other organization. This course has been adopted at the request of Mrs. Sheridan.

THE SILK WORM.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE CULTURE FROM ONE OF EXPERIENCE.

Silk Culture In America—Value of the Mulberry Food for the Worm—Molting—Spinning the Chrysalis—Hatching the Moths.

(Special Correspondence.)

DELAND, FLA., July 30.—The United States is now and has been for some time the third silk producing country of the world. It has every advantage. The climate is healthy and [illegible] for the work is not [illegible] but it is fascinating, pleasant and money-making profitable. It is not a [illegible] for the [illegible] but for the intelligent [illegible] six days. For [illegible] time [illegible] have [illegible] for [illegible] stands as [illegible] 4 [illegible] being [illegible] per pound.

In preparing to begin silk culture the first step is to procure the eggs. They are [illegible] in [illegible] and [illegible] in [illegible] which the worm deposits its eggs. The moths are [illegible] from the United States. The Mulberry is a variety of the white mulberry, is perfectly [illegible] and that and [illegible] will raise mulberries. You can have about 1,200 trees for [illegible] and one acre in full bearing should feed 100,000 worms.

COCOONERY FRAME.

The eggs retail for about $5 an ounce, but the department of agriculture has been for some years furnishing applicants with a small quantity with which to experiment. The eggs are about the size and shape of a turnip seed, and when properly impregnated are blue, slate, gray or green in color, with a small dark spot at one end. This is the micropyle through which the eggs are impregnated before oviposition, and through which the worm at the proper time emerges. When the egg is first laid it is a light yellow and if it so remains is worthless, but if fertile it will change color in a few days.

Having secured the eggs, being sure to obtain them from a reliable source, place them where they can be kept cold and in no danger of hatching prematurely. If they should, however, get the start of you feed them on Lindsley's tender lettuce. They do not relish this food, but can live on it a short time. When the leaves begin to put forth on gum trees, "set" the eggs by spreading them evenly on a tray in some place where the temperature can be kept at about 60 deg. Keep the air moist, if possible, as that will assist the hatching. After setting you eggs [illegible] set more in my living room near the stove, covering them lightly and keeping the kettle boiling for [illegible] prepare your cocoonery. For this any room will do that can be well aerated and ventilated. Its furniture consists of tall strong frames reaching nearly to the ceiling, so made that when the trays rest upon them the trays will be about two feet apart, one above the other.

The feeding trays are where the worms live and eat. Until spinning time they are confined to stay within those narrow boundaries. The trays are made by nailing together four pieces of lath, edge [illegible] wide, of a convenient size to handle, about 2x3 feet. The [illegible] must be covered with [illegible] twine half an inch apart, as here shown. Plenty of them with a small stove, a thermometer, a couple of tables and plenty of mulberry netting—which will furnish the cocoonery.

In about six days your eggs will have turned a little lighter in color, and if you [illegible] you can hear a faint clicking sound among them, and about the sixth or seventh morning you will find numbers of tiny black creatures among the eggs.

As soon as the worms appear spread over them a piece of mosquito netting and sprinkle it with tender leaf, and these will soon be covered with the little pilgrims, who immediately begin the work for which they seem to have been created. They eat incessantly, ravenously, and the delighted attendant never tires of watching them. I have got out of bed in the night and watched them, unmindful of the flight of time and danger of chills. You [illegible] and exercise. While young they are not very exacting in their demands, yet a great deal of time is not to be spent out in attending to these observations. Each day they are larger and lighter in color. The first day they resemble a small black ant. They should be plentifully fed from the first. The leaves will get dry before the young worms can eat them, and should be given [illegible] small quantities. The leaves should be fresh and free from dampness. Sunshine and water are fine things for flowers, human beings and most other creatures, "just and unjust," but the sun does not shine nor the rains fall for the silk worm's enjoyment. The sun hurts it and wet food induces disease. Even the egg must be most carefully kept from the sun's rays or the delicate germ will die. It is better therefore to get the [illegible] leaves in [illegible] and before a storm a good stock should be laid in. In picking the leaves discard the terminal ones, which are too rich for the worms. They should invariably be fed early in the morning, about 6 o'clock, and as late as 10 o'clock in the evening. When the worms are large you can heap leaves upon the trays in the evening for their [illegible], and they will manage to have the trays bare and excite your wonder and admiration by their apparently starving condition, as they crawl proudly toward you when you get there in the morning. But the baby worms must be fed lightly, or you will lose many of them.

About the fifth or sixth day your family will begin to lose appetite and to look more shiny, and a small, dark, three cornered spot will show between the tiny head and the hood like part back of the head. This is the beginning of the first molt or shed, of which it will have four before it is ready for the public gaze to prepare for its transformation. The molt is the casting of the skin which has become too tight. The worm in molting raises the front of its body, sitting quite erect in a dignified state and stillness for several hours. They are frequently quite sick, and I have seen during the molt, but if they are kept clean, have plenty of pure air and fresh food, your losses in this way will be few. After each molt your worms will be lighter in color and prettier.

The silk worm is very gentle. It never bites, it has no sting or means of defense. It is always hungry except during the molts, when no food can be given and it should not be disturbed. But as soon as the worm is awake it is ready for food, which should be ready in abundance on clean trays.

From the second week of its life on to the last the amount of food it eats accumulates in astounding. The trays should be changed daily, or they will become sour and moldy, and silk worms are, if possible, more susceptible to disease arising from filthy conditions than are human beings. They can't endure dust, tobacco smoke or bad air, and this determination toward cleanliness, together with the leaf picking, makes life pretty stirring for the attendant. About twelve days after the fourth molt the hitherto quiet worms begin to get restless. They leave the trays and go prowling for likely places in which to bestow their golden treasure. They are not always easy to please. They have a knowledge of their own, and you wishes may not be theirs and if not, they will gain the day. You can tie two trays together and fasten in those where they are feeling, place brush, shavings, crumpled pieces of cloth, net or paper, small paper boxes or cones, to tempt their wandering fancy, and yet some of them will spin in the [illegible] drooping trays, and [illegible] beautiful [illegible] built [illegible] worm's life when she was [illegible] ball.

The worm just before spinning clears its body of [illegible] and is beautiful, almost gold in color, [illegible] transparent. After that she [illegible] and commences [illegible] thread [illegible] much as a [illegible] that the worm draws the thread [illegible] a little later on is under [illegible] six days [illegible] nothing the head [illegible] spins in every direction. After fastening its supports [illegible] feet out, and by [illegible] Gradually the [illegible] and [illegible] tools in [illegible]

In about six days from the time the spinning begins [illegible] the cocoons. Do not [illegible] the cocoons [illegible] Those [illegible] taken, place [illegible] with your needle, and have [illegible] enough of your [illegible] be sold, laid in boxes or shallow jars the moths will not appear for several days, but these days will not be idle ones by any means. The cocoons must be stripped of the floss or outer silk, and steamed or baked in order to kill the chrysalis. Steaming is the easiest and best method of killing. If near a place where a steam engine is working a good way of steaming is to have a tight box or barrel with a hole near the bottom and supports across the top as shown in the illustration, but not too closely together. Then take cocoons or thin white cotton and make bags about three inches wide and a yard in length, not necessary so wide. Fill these carefully with the cocoons to be steamed, and with a short thread tack as you would a mattress. Tie a bag to each end of a steam pipe to the boiler, and have the other end in the box at the bottom of the barrel, steam for twenty minutes and the work of killing will be effectually done.

Another plan is to have a large tin [illegible] which a smaller, perforated one can sit without touching the water. The cocoons to be put in the smaller one, and the water to boil furiously twenty-five or thirty minutes. But this is tedious. When you steam in the way last given the perforated box [illegible] put the cocoons in, draw the ends of the cloth over the top of the cocoons and then put on the lid. The moths, when stamped, are very carefully handled, as the steam softens them so, and they should be spread evenly on clean white cloths in an airy room to dry. If not thoroughly steamed you may expect to be greeted some morning by the fluttering wings of the escaped prisoners, whom a moderate wounding seems not to affect.

When the chrysalis has burst the shell and made ready to enter upon its new plane of existence, which it does by gently forcing apart one end of the cocoon, it comes forth a very pretty little moth clad in fuzzy white cloak, with heavy black antennae and delicate tracery of wing. As when a moth warm, it is still the most helpless of creatures, being absolutely to fly, to eat nor in any way to protect itself against injury. Ants, roaches, mice, birds, all are its enemies. Ants will carry off the eggs, and even pierce the body of the living moth as she is emerging from the cocoon and bear away the eggs with which she is laden. The ants, we all know, are a very enterprising people.

As soon as they are dry they should be gently lifted aside from the crowded cocoons and placed where they can be undisturbed for about six hours. When separating them handle very gently, so as not to injure them. Place the females for a few minutes on sheets of blotting or other soft paper, and when they have disclosed a liquid place them on sheets or cloths where it is intended they shall deposit their eggs. If the worms have been perfectly healthy, and you do not intend the eggs for sale, but for your own use, [illegible] years and are going to submit them to a microscopical examination [illegible] which, if all is right, [illegible] hung up in dark places, or, if you prefer you can, after ascertaining that the eggs are good (which, as I have before mentioned, is shown by their change of color), dip the cloths in cool, soft water and fold for a few moments, then, with a blunt knife or paper folder, scrape them gently off, dry them, but not in the sun; let the air dry them a few hours, when thoroughly dry put away in thin muslin bags or perforated tin [illegible] and turn out occasionally to see that they do not mold. Keep them in a cold place. If they freeze, do not be uneasy—they have been sent to foreign climes on ice, and will suffer no harm—but guard against too great warmth; for if a sudden warm spell comes, or the heat of a stove is too near them, they may hatch.
